THE PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE.

President Roosevelt's message to congress yesterday is one of the longest executive documents of recent years, and in its most important recommendations, one of the most revolutionary in its spirit of centralization and aggrandizement of federal authority.

Basically first in its importance to people of Utah and adjoining states, is the reference in the message to polygamy in discussing the need of federal marriage and divorce laws. After setting forth the advantages of a constitutional amendment to permit uniform laws on this subject, he adds: "In particular it would be good because it would confer on congress the power at once to deal radically and efficiently with polygamy; and this should be done, whether or not marriage and divorce are dealt with. It is neither safe nor proper to leave the question of polygamy to be dealt with by the several states. Power to deal with it should be conferred on the national government."

Apart from this recommendation and excepting treatment of coal lands, the other subjects considered concern other sections of the country at large more particularly.

In their order the recommendations may be summarized as follows: Prohibition of political contributions by corporations, directly or indirectly, for any purpose.

Conferring right of appeal on the government in criminal cases where questions of law only have been involved.

Restriction of the abuse of the right to issue injunctions by the courts.

Capital punishment for the crime of rape, or assault with intent to commit the crime.

Extension of federal educational work, especially in the District of Columbia.

Sermon on the relations of labor and capital, with urgent recommendation that the law limiting hours of employment for railway employees be enacted and the employers' liability act be extended to cover federal employees in navy yards, arsenals and the like.

Creation of an arbitration commission to investigate controversies between employers and employed with a view to conciliation and the publication of findings.

Withdrawal of coal lands from private entry; recommendation that such lands hereafter be operated under federal supervision with royalty, the supervision to include protection of the consumer, both as to price for fuel and price for transportation.

Larger control of corporations, not only as to their operations, but to prevent over-capitalization.

Suggested revision of the law so as to permit concerted action by railroads as associations, provided the action is with the consent of the interstate commerce commission and is published.

An inheritance tax for federal purposes, and another attempt to secure an income tax which will be held constitutional by the supreme court.

Further technical and industrial training, particularly for the wage-earner and farmer.

Extension of forest reserves and irrigation.

The enactment of a ship subsidy law.

Reform of the currency law to permit the issuance of emergency currency by national banks, subject to a heavy tax which would compel withdrawal of issues when the emergency passed. No bill to be considered which could affect the value of government 2 per cent bonds used as a basis for currency issues.

Lower tariff or absolute free trade for the Philippines; citizenship for Porto Ricans; expenditures of federal appropriations in aid of education and internal improvements in Hawaii; better form of government for Alaska.

Federal authority to enforce upon the states the rights of aliens conferred by treaties with other nations, designed particularly to cover such cases as the Japanese in San Francisco schools.

Promise to take action in this case, whether special power is conferred, as recommended, or not.

Recital of Cuban history and action taken in Cuba, with advice to the Cubans as to their future behavior.

Discussion of pan-American conference at Rio de Janeiro, and report of Secretary Root's participation therein.
Promise of special message on Panama; recommendation as to Algeciras conference and the convention adopted by it.

Report on destruction of fur seals by pelagic hunters; need of new laws governing them.

The approaching peace conference at The Hague.

Need of construction of new ships to maintain strength of navy, and for improvements in army and navy regulations affecting promotions and general conditions of the service.

It is obvious from the variety and nature of the recommendations made by the message that this is likely to be one of the liveliest short sessions congress has ever known. While the message makes no reference to the dismissal of negro troops for the Brownsville affair, the introduction of resolutions on the subject, even before the message was received, makes it evident that this matter will be threshed out most vigorously.

The promise to use all the powers of the federal government in behalf of the San Francisco Japanese is also full of portent, because it involves more than the Japanese and will arouse the instant ire of every senator and congressman who has any decided views as to the limitations of the federal government in what have been regarded heretofore as purely local and state affairs.
It has been pointed out already, that under the president's interpretation, a negro citizen of another nation having a treaty with the United States could appeal for federal aid to force his admission to public schools in the south or elsewhere—with what results may easily be foreseen.

The renewal of the effort to secure free trade or a lower tariff for the Philippines will invite another discussion, with the same result as attended the president's first attempt. In any event, the proposal is apt to precipitate a serious discussion on general lines if any serious effort is made to push the bill he recommends. Incidentally, the question of citizenship for the Porto Ricans is a fruitful theme for debate and may be expected to invite a controversy.

It may be taken for granted that the injunction question will be handled with gloves, since Speaker Cannon is committed against any modification of existing practices or laws, and many of the Republican leaders are in the same position. Other labor legislation recommended will get just as much consideration from congress as the Republican leaders are compelled to give it by force of public opinion, and no more.

The proposed uniform marriage and divorce laws would involve an abdication of state jurisdiction which makes their adoption extremely doubtful. Even those states which admit the desirability of uniformity are unwilling to yield further to the incessant, persistent encroachments of the present administration upon the rights of state and local governments. Even if an agreement could be reached as to the text of a law, there would be no possibility of securing the consent of congress to it, and the objections to it would be quite as strenuous in the north as in the south.

Currency reform is another perennial subject and one on which agreement is next to impossible, although there is no doubt but that the present system with its annually recurring pressure on the money market when the crops move, is antiquated and unsatisfactory.
The difficulty usually lies in the fact that the systems devised have originated in a desire for a currency that will provide for speculative crises rather than for the varying demands of genuine commercial activity. Flexibility without inflation is next to impossible, and what would please Wall street would not meet with the approval of the Kansas farmer. It is to be hoped some action can be achieved which will improve the national system, but it will be difficult to devise a plan that would be satisfactory to the whole country.

Utah is vitally interested in the coal lands problem, and it will watch the course of congress in this particular with anxiety. The present, or rather the suspended, land laws were an invitation to fraud, since they made it impossible to acquire honestly tracts of coal land large enough to operate successfully. The withdrawal of all coal lands permanently for an extended period would be a calamity in view of the urgent need of more mines and larger production here in the west; but whether the plan proposed by the president is the best, whether it is feasible or desirable is too large a question to be settled without full discussion based on expert knowledge. Only one thing is certain: the people of this region are dissatisfied with the conditions attending coal production and consumption, and they will welcome any legislation that shall provide better fuel and more of it at more reasonable prices.

Taken altogether, the message is notable chiefly for its length, the large number of topics discussed and the invariable trend toward an assumption of power for the federal government which the constitution does not contemplate and which the people at large will resent.
